

Jayne's postscript

I took this photo of a poster print in the lace museum at Burano, Venice, while visiting there last week - it shows a beautiful 12th century mosaic that I saw in a church on the island of Torcello and intriguingly you can see a 'lace fringe' on the cloak!

How pleased I was that lace making friends had encouraged me to visit Venice as part of my Pilgrimage! It was not on my May/June itinerary so after five weeks back in the parish I went away again on a five day visit to Venice!

This visit proved to be a wonderful postscript to the Lace Pilgrimage. The museum on Burano has mainly needle lace in the exhibition, but it is beautifully laid out and although my main focus has been bobbin lace I am so glad I visited. Round the corner from the museum there is a shop housing an exhibition gallery of bobbin and needle lace from Italy, France and Belgium - also well worth a visit.
